POLICE IN HUNT FOR MISSING RICHMOND MAN

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Richmond can be as proud of its fire department as it is of its police department.

* * * *

Through Fire Chief W. P. Cooper and his men the fire loss in our city has been cut to the bone.

* * * *

And this was only possible through care and inspection of Richmond property.

* * * *

Fire Chief Cooper and the members of the department believe that it is not only their duty to put out fires — but it is also their duty to prevent them.

* * * *

Fire prevention has been stressed by Chief Cooper until it is the part of every Richmond fireman's creed.

* * * *

The Richmond fire department, in comparison to some fire departments, is small.

But the local organization is so closely knit and so well handled that it does the work of a much larger department.

* * * *

Every man in the department, from Chief Cooper down the line, can be lauded for their work.

* * * *

The Graf Zeppelin is again blazing air trails across the Atlantic.

* * * *

And to the world, the Graf Zeppelin is the symbol of German genius.

* * * *

America and England have forgotten their old war-time hatred of Germany, and instead, admire the people of that nation.

* * * *

When the treaty was signed at the end of the war, Germany was left without her marvelous army, her tank corps and her famous military aviation.

* * * *

With the size of her army limited to a few men, Germany has made that standing army of hers one of the best in the world . . . and a nightmare to France.

* * * *

Every man in that army of

DREAM CLUES IN SEARCH FOR MISSING JUDGE ENGS

OAKLAND, May 21.—With the investigation of "dream clues" today, an element of fantasy was added to the mysterious disappearance of Superior Judge Edward W. Engs of Alameda county.

Two different persons reported dreams today that basically were the same.

The first read, "I saw a man lying in a basement in a vacant house. It was Judge Engs." Mrs. Lucinda Danielson, 547 Twenty-fourth avenue sent this report.

The second, sent by Archie W. Stocks, 2068 Eighty-seventh street reported that, "I saw the man plainly. It was Judge Engs. The vacant house was at the end of a blind street."

Police hearkening back 20 years when a murder was solved and the culprit apprehended by the dream of a woman living next door to the victim, searched empty houses in the vicinity of the Engs' home.

The search, they carefully explained however, was not because they believe in dreams, but because such a search had previously been overlooked.

Late this evening police were rushed to the Claremont-Chabot road in north Oakland when a friend of the missing jurist reported he had seen the judge with his clothes torn and dirty, and pressing a handkerchief to his head.

Use Of Song Stirs Ire

LOS ANGELES, May 21.—UP—When a song has been used so frequently in motion pictures as a thread song that it threatens to be worn threadbare and even dogs are barking to the tune, it is time for an injunction, Mary McCoy contended in federal court today.

McCoy said that he had worked for Sennett back in the days when the movies were seen and not heard and when Gloria Swanson, Mabel Normand and other later greats were on the Senpett lot. SPORTS

ALLSTANDARDS, REFINERY IN TIE GAME

When "Red" Johnson came up to bat in the last of the seventh in yesterday's All-Standard-Refinery battle, three All-Standards had made themselves heroes by popping Deardoff's curve over the right field fence.

When "Red" Johnson had concluded his seventh inning swatting career, one moer baseball had been donated to the inhabitants of Nevin avenue and the Standards and Refinery were tied 4 to 4 to the great glee of the Refinery boys.

The All-Standards were getting ready to go home at about 6:40 o'clock last night when Johnson blasted their hopes with the fourth homer of the game. Muth had scored Billy Yore for the All-Standards with a homer in the first inning, and Bertoli of the Refinery scored in the last of the seventh, and Lane of the Refinery tied the score in the third inning. Murphy, All-Standard chucker, hit the second homer of the contest in the fifth inning, and Lear, also of the All-Standards, added one more four-bagger to the increasing home run total. Then of course Johnson came to the rescue of the flagging Refinery with his fortunate fence-climber, tying the score 4 to 4.

Never shall the history of the next two extra innings be forgotten in the Standard Oil baseball lore. Nobody succeeded in scoring in the eighth, but things began to dazzle in the ninth and final inning. Yore and Muth trotted homeward in the first of the inning for the All-Standards. The Refinery boys started to look mighty anxious, but their flickering hope flared into confidence when Lane walked, and Johnson doubled. Then Zimmerman took the great responsibility upon his shoulders, and popped an easy one in the direction of Thorson at second base. The Refinery's hopes sank as they saw the pellet wing its easy way toward Thorson, but they suddenly went into reverse as Thorson did a spectacular jig and let the ball slip from his fingers. The fatal error allowed Lane and Johnson to slip home, tying the score at 6 to 6. Bertoli ended the spectacular game by popping out to Wickesser, and Richmond baseball fans returned to their respective homes to spin one more yarn of a great baseball battle.

The honest reason

THERE IS ONLY one real reason for smoking and that's pleasure. A pretty good reason after all. The cigarette you select in the long run will be the one that can contribute most to your enjoyment.

Camels are made with that idea in mind—the idea that genuine smoke pleasure is what you want in a cigarette.

When you try them you will find a refreshing difference—a mild, mellow richness of choice tobaccos—a blended harmony of fragrance, silky smooth—that makes smoking a delight.

The fact that more millions have chosen Camel than any other cigarette is a tribute to an honest product, marketed for an honest purpose.

HAY FEVER

By Dr. G. A. ESTERBERG

One of the most annoying diseases of the respiratory tract is hay fever. What is the cause of hay fever? The pollen of weeds and flowers, you say. In a sense, this is true, but if this were the one underlying cause, we would all have hay fever.

But we do not. Only those have it whose upper respiratory passages are of lowered vitality. If the vitality of these parts be raised to the point of vitality of one who does not have this disease, then the one who has been suffering from hay fever will not have it any longer. Therefore, the problem is to raise the vitality of these membranes to normal. In order to do this we must know what keeps the vitality low.

Viewing hay fever from the orthodox standpoint, its causes are best stated by quoting Deason. "The theoretic causes of this disease may be expressed in the various names which have been given to it as follows: The name hay fever suggests that it is a febrile condition caused by pollen irritation. Peach cold, rose cold, rose fever, rose catarrh, rye fever and ragweed fever, suggest similar specitic causes.'

It is very important to consider the nutritional impairment of the mucous membrane of the upper air passages, and adjacent tissues and structures. If these tissues are in a healthy condition and well nourished, the presence of pollen would more than likely have no apparent effect on them. It is only when the vitality of the membrane is impaired, or when it presents an unhealthy condition, that the different irritating pollens, etc., have their effect, and the symptoms of hay fever present themselves.

From a later viewpoint there must be some basic cause, an important predisposing factor present before the membranes become susceptible to the irritating pollens. In every case of true hay fever that I have seen up to date, certain toxic elements have been present in the sinuses and areas involved. These toxic elements, in conjunction with any mechanical defect which might be present, impairs the vitality of the parts. In addition to this mild degree of local toximia, we usually find a low grade of pus infection, plus a specific reaction of hay fever.

The presence of the identified toxic elements- and disorganization which is revealed in later methods of diagnosis, and the presence of the mild pus infection, makes the diagnosis of hay fever and its basic causes definit.

The sinuses are the recesses opening up into the nose and the upper respiratory passages. Frequently the tonsils and eustachian tubes are involved.

Asthma and bronchitis are very closely related to hay fever. About 70 per cent of hay fever will run into asthma, within a few years. But, not all people who have asthma, have hay fever; most asthmatics do not have hay fever. But, both of these diseases are primarily due to some underlying cause that lowers the vitality of the nerves and mucous membranes of the air passages.

Next week's subject will be on "Ulceration of the Stomach."

Vice President's Son Denies Graft

CHICAGO, May 21.—UP—Harry K. Curtis, son of vice president Curtis, entered a general denial today to charges that he had accepted fees from contractors on promises of government building contracts.

Curtis, one of the most prominent lawyers in Chicago, was questioned for two hours in the offices of State Attorney John A. Swanson, after several Chicago contractors had accused him of taking "detainer fees" with the understanding that he would provide them with federal buildings.

The son of the vice president left the session without making any comment. Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney, said that Curtis admitted receiving $10,000 from the contractors but insisted the money was for legal services and as such was collected legitimately.

Curtis refused to describe the nature of the legal services. Roche said, but promised to return later with his record for further questioning.

Offerman for the purpose of transporting liquor across the U. S. boundary.

Confession Told At Killer-Suspect Trial At Capital

SACRAMENTO, May 21.—UP—Confessions asserted'y made by John South and his wife after the fatal shooting of Robert D. Freeman, prohibition agent, in their home at Yountville, were introduced at their trial on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and resisting an officer here late today.

The trial started in federal court this morning. Dr. C. H. Bulson of Napa was the first witness after the jury was selected and he gave scientific testimony.

The alleged confessions declared an altercation preceded the shooting and started when Freeman, emerging from a bedroom, saw South pouring liquor into the sink and told him to stop.

District Attorney Wallace T. Rutherford and Sheriff John P. Steckter of Napa county took the stand this afternoon and testified they searched the South home after the shooting. They were followed by Emil P. Locarnini, who took statement from South and his wife.

It is expected the case will go to the jury Thursday.

ELIZABETH, N. J., May 21.—UP—A jury decided today that George Daniecki, at the age of 15, is not fitted to society and hence must spend the rest of his life in prison.

DENNIS KING STARRED IN TALKIE

Curious fans, who have often wondered whether a screen idol ever condescends to become an extra, should read this.

It happened recently at the Paramount studio in Hollywood. Dennis King, who was working on a sequence of "The Vagabond King" in which he is starred, finished his day's work early.

After doffing his mediaeval tights and tunic, and resuming the dress of a gentleman of the twentieth century, he stopped in on the "Behind the Make-Up" setting where Kay Francis and Hal Skelly were being directed in a scene by Robert Milton.

"Just in time" King was greeted by Milton. "Walk out that door for me in this scene, and as you go out, say 'good afternoon'."

The star-extra did his bit, and as a result received the compliments of the director.

"TheVagabond King" in which Dennis King plays the starring title role, is based on the famous novel "If I Were King" by Justin Huntly McCarthy, and the subsequent operetta, "The Vagabond King" which was written by William H. Post, Brian Hooker and Rudolph Friml and in which Dennis King was the star before Paramount signed him for work in an all-talking and all-singing picture.

Jeanette MacDonald, who was last seen and heard as the leading lady for Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade" is the lovely royal niece of Louis XI, and the beloved of Francis Villon — Dennis King— in this gorgeous all-Technicolor singing romance, which comes to the Fox California theatre for two days, beginning today.

On the same bill is a Terrytown comedy "Indian Pudding."

ZEPPELIN TO LAND IN BRAZIL

little southwest of the Cape Verde islands.

The message added: "Will arrive probably Thurday at Pernambuco."

The weather at Natal was reported threatening tonight, with lowering temperature.

TO PLAN STOP AT RIO DE JANEIRO

PERNAHBUCO, Brazil, May 21.—UP—The Graf Zeppelin, cruising steadily above the south Atlantic on the second day of its flight here from Seville, Spain, was expected to reach Pernambuco tomorrow.

It was understood Dr. Hugo Eckener, in command, planned to stop for a few hours at Giquia airdrome here, and then proceed to Rio De Janeiro at ten a. m.

Interest in the arrival of the Zeppelin had risen to a high pitch tonight, visitors filled the hotels and it was difficult to get accommodations elsewhere. Weather improved today, with good visibility and a light southeast wind.

Reports from Praia, St. Iago, Cape Verde islands, said the Graf Zepplein was sighted there late today, as the great air liner completed the crossing of the Cape Verde isalnds and headed out over the Atlantic on her way directly to Brazil.

She had been averaging about 65 miles an hour, following a southeasterly course from Spain down the Atlantic coast of Africa, across the Canary islands and, passing the Cape Verde group, flew above the open ocean on the way to South America.

MAIL DROPPED AT ISLAND

PRAIA, ST. IAGO, Cape Verde Islands, May 21.—UP—The Graf Zeppelin dropped four parcels of mail for Europe as she passed over here late today at about 500 feet. The mail was dropped off attached to parachutes. The weather was ideal.

BIG TOURIST TRAVEL SEEN

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—Estimates that motor tourist travel over the Victory highway to northern and central California this year will be increased by forty percent over last year were announced today by the California State Automobile association, western headquarters for this trans-continental route. These estimates are based on data received by George S. Forderer, treasurer of the Automobile association and a western director of the Highway association, in a letter from T. C. Whiteker, president of the Victory Highway association.

Improvement of the Victory highway across Kansas and Colorado is credited by Whiteker as being a principal factor that will draw moter travel through the west to California over this route. Reports received at the Topeka, Kansas headquarters of the Victory Highway association by Whiteker show that extensive programs for further development of this route where it crosses western states will be completed in time for the 1930 summer travel season.

Extensive exploitation of the Victory route by both the California State Automobile association as western headquarters for this artery and the Victory Highway association is also credited with the anticipated travel increase, according to Forderer. Through the channels of over a thousand other affiliated A. A. A. motor clubs, the State Automobile association has distributed maps and literature advertising the Victory route to northern and central California. From the Topeka headquarters of the Victory Highway association thousands of Victory highway maps have also been distributed.

Indicating the vast amount of improvement work under way on the Victory highway, Forderer cited the following construction programs in three states:

Kansas has let bids for $407,739 of paving work on the Victory highway from New Cambria to Abilene.

Colorado is undertaking a program of work on the Victory route for 1930 which calls for the expenditure of $1,000,000,000.

Utah plans complete work this year on a fifty mile stretch which is the only section of the Victory highway in that state which is not an excellent gravel and oiled highway or better.

Two others on the deep sea fishing expedition, Adolph Hess, 50, and Bernard Wetzel, were rescued by four Japanese who launched their boat here and hurried out to the disabled ship.

Bodies of the victims had not been recovered, although the shore line was being patrolled by a big crew of men.

NOTES WILL BE EXCHANGED ON NAVAL PACT

WASHINGTON, May 21.—UP—Arrangements for an exchange of notes with Japan and Great Britain to clarify replacement provisions of the London naval treaty were begun by the state department today, as the anti-treaty battle spread to the floor of the senate.

Simultaneously President Hoover intervened to prevent adjournment without action on the treaty son of his wishes. On this quesand informed majority leader Watson, Senators Borah and Johnson, who campaigned successfully together against the Versailles treaty and the World court were split today.

Johnson opened the attack on the floor with a demand that the treaty go over until next winter. Borah immediately issued a statement that he "would proceed on the assumption that it is to be disposed of at this session." Senator Reed, Repn., Pa., said the treaty would be reported early next week.

Aroused by this dissention, Senator Walsh, Dem., Mont., briefly addressed the senate urging the ratification of the treaty and the earliest possible construction of an American merchant marine to equal that of other countries.

In the background were the foreign relations and naval affairs committees, in which Admirals J. R. Pringle and Mark L. Bristol continued the navy's adverse criticism of the treaty. They questioned the cruiser provisions and the increased ratio of naval strength allotted Japan. Both of the committees will continue tomorrow.

Johnson continued the lead the treaty attack in foreign relations and on the senate floor struck hard against immediate consideration of the instrument.

"We ought to have ample time" he said, "for the American people to understand exactly what this treaty is. They do not understand it now, and very few members of the senate do because of because of the overwhelming duties that press upon them. They have little conception of it."

"Moreover, the senate, because of the physical and mental fatigue, is in no fit condition wisely to legislate. It would be infinitely better that the treaty be put over until fall, so that both the people and legislators may know exactly what it is.

"We have had one experience in 1922 with a so-called disarmament conference, which ought to be sufficient to teach us to move with circumspection and caution with reference to ratification."

Borah's statement said Watson had told him the treaty was to be disposed of at this session. But when Hoover communicated with Watson today, the latter was doubtful of the possibility of keeping a quorum present much beyond the tariff debate. If Johnson or another of the treaty opponents undertook even a brief filibuster, it is believed a quorum would be impossible to obtain after several days of talk.

Senator Oddie, Repn., Nev., and Chairman Hale of the naval affairs committee also oppose early treaty consideration. Hale told the United Press his hearings would continue considerably beyond tomorrow, when Rear Admirals W. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, and A. J. Hepburn, chief of staff of the fleet, are to testify.

Clarification of the replacement and escalator clauses was suggested by Senator Swanson, Dem., Virginia.

Several senators and admirals believe and Secretary of the navy Adams has conceded that under Article 19, Britain might be privileged to begin during the life of the treaty, construction of thousands of tons of 8-inch gun cruisers, to replace aging 6-inch vessels to the disadvantage of the transporting, housing and feeding not become over age so soon.

American Boy Pilot Lauds Richfield Gas

NEW YORK, May 21.—Paying a high tribute to the gasoline and lubricants used in his double record-breaking flight across America, Frank H. Goldsborough, the "American Boy" pilot, today issued a statement in which he declared that it has been found unnecessary to replace or overhaul any parts of the Kinner motor which powered his little fleet biplane.

Goldsborough's signed statement released to officials of the Richfield Oil company said:

"I used Richlube motor oil and Richlube rocker-arm grease thruout and was highly pleased with their performance at all times. I did not experience any unusually high temperatures, the motor ran cool throughout the trip and, on being taken down, it was not found necessary to replace or overhaul any of the parts.

"Richfield gasoline, used in preference to any other, gave the utmost satisfaction. I actually got more "revs" and the amount consumed was less than I expected."

His statement finished with a strong recommendation to pilots and engine mechanics for both of Richfield's "partners in power."

Recapitulation of Goldsborough's accomplishments discloses that in flying from Los Angeles to New York on his return in 28 hours and 18 minutes, flying time, he exceeded by nearly 20 hours the 48-hour record previously held by Richard Jones, Flushing high school student. It also shows that his time between New York and Los Angeles—34 hours and 3 minutes— is a new junior record for the east-west route.

Goldsborough's heritage of speed is an honest one, he being the son of the late Bryce Goldsborough, daring aviator who was lost when Mrs. Frances Grayson attempted to fly the Atlantic in her ill-fated amphibian.

THE WOMAN OF IT

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

How We Women Will at Last Understand the Tariff—And When They Do—

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

IF MANY other women are like us—and, really, we've found that lots of them are—

They never have been able to penetrate the mysteries of the periodic tariff battles.

Or even to take this running Republican-Democratic fight with due seriousness.

Women somehow have been more interested
In such matters as whether to bob their hair (or let it grow).
How to land a job—or a husband.
What color to paint the wicker furniture for the sun parlor.
When to have Junior's tonsils cut.
Where to move next October.
Even in public affairs, women have found Prohibition,
Or world peace, or child labor, or the eight-hour day,
Questions of greater moment than those vague ructions about rates on steel or wool
Even newspaper-reading women often have shamelessly skipped
Those long, indignant, authoritative but somehow unappealing tariff editorials.

Nevertheless, if many other women are like us, they're changing—

Honestly, we're getting so tariff-conscious
That we can lie in a steamer chair, on the sunny piazza of the bungalow,
And gaze at a glorious cobalt ocean, curving into lines of lacy foam eighty feet below,
And breathe rapturously the salt-sweet sea-wind—
And STILL rage, in our mind,
As we think of what the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill is going to do to us!
As nearly as we can make out—and this seems to be the opinion of plenty of other women—
WHAT it will do will be PLENTY!
When and if that tariff of abominations becomes law,
We're going to pay more for all our clothes, and all the clothes worn by our children—
Representative Mary Norton says that a $3 felt hat
Will cost $5.45 under the new tariff.
That a $5 pair of shoes will cost $6
And a $10 pair will jump to $12—
That even handkerchiefs will be increased 3½ cents each.
Why, shoe laces have a 15 per cent. duty
And on agate buttons the duty is 358 per cent.!
Then, under the new tariff, practically everything we buy for our homes
Will be ever so much more expensive—
The duty on household crockery is up more than 60 per cent.,
And that on furniture has increased nearly 50 per cent.,
Rugs and blankets and table linen and oilcloth and linoleum will all cost much more,
Even keeping clean and keeping our homes clean will come higher.
Since the rate on sponges goes up 40 per cent.,
That on toothbrushes soars 60 per cent.,
And the rate on brooms and starches has increased 40 per cent.
Imagine, an increase of 60 per cent. is even scheduled for Christmas tree ornaments.
And beef and sugar and other foods will take a high jump!
Believe us, any woman who goes shopping and pays bills—
Whether with her own moderate salary or her husband's—
Can understand what such a tariff will do to her pocketbook.
And it looks as if her hour of understanding approaches fast!
When it strikes, SOMETHING is due to strike tariff-booster politicians,
Even if they wrap around them a Hoover apron.
So true it is that they can fool some of the women all the time,
And all the women some of the time,
But they CANNOT fool ALL the women ALL the time—
Or much longer!

GOD BLESS OUR HOME!

(For Esther L. Schwartz)

When the dinner's burnt, and the plumbing goes wrong,
And the doctor's bill is a half-mile long,
And you and hubby have had a fight,
And the kids get colic and scream all night,
And the cleaning and mending pile mountain-high,
And your backbone aches till you nearly die,
And your in-laws' tongues are a-wag again—
Oh, don't you envy the old maids then?

You call the single girls jealous saps
With a watchful eye on all likely chaps.
You claim that if honest, they'd have to say
That their lives are dreary and drab and gray.
Didn't you care for your mother or dad?
What sort of home was the one you had?
Were there no friends, either girl or boy,
That your single life was so void of joy?
There are stones in all walks of life, I'm told,
For I've talked to matrons, both young and old,
And a line like yours I have yet to hear,
That you are a novice is painfully clear.

No doubt you'll tell us—and swear it's true—
That this is the way you always do:
Your housekeeping's perfect, your meals just right,
Your dwelling a haven of sweetness and light,
You love to cook and you love to scrub,
You're happiest draped o'er a steaming tub,
You handle your "two jobs" with calm repose,
Could manage a third if occasion arose,
And if ever vexations come your way
You wave them aside and you sweetly say,
"Just picture the envy of some poor miss
"Who'd give her right eye for a life like this!"
And you glow with the thought that all is well.
Yes, Esther darling, you do like—the very deuce!

ETHEL R. SEELY.

The chances of conjugal happiness, says Supreme Court Justice Ford, would be greatly enhanced if every husband remembered the date of his wife's birthday and wedding anniversary. What the Judge doesn't say, calorically comments the husband we know best, is how the dickens ANY husband can manage to keep from forgetting!

Oh, Go to Bed

"DAD, why don't ducks get wet?"

"Because their feathers form a sort of raincoat. The feathers are very close together, and, besides, the duck keeps the feathers well oiled and, as oil and water won't mix, the oil keeps the water from penetrating the feathers."

"How does the duck oil his feathers?"

"He rubs the oil on his head from an oil gland at the base of his tail, and with his head oils the rest of his body."

"Doesn't the water touch the duck?"

"No, it only touches the thin coat of oil."

"Isn't the oil a liquid, a fluid? Isn't it wet?"

"Certainly the oil is wet."

"Why don't ducks get wet?"

"Oh, go to bed."

After several false starts, the strawberry season is here at last. For a while one could not depend on the quality of the berries in the markets. Some would be tender and flavory, but many were hard and tasteless. Now, however, the berries in the market are uniformly good, and have that fresh, sharp tang that only the early berries have.

KAREN HOLLIS

These are delicious for shortcakes, but there are many other ways of serving strawberries that must not be forgotten. One of the best of these in French strawberry tarts. Among their many other accomplishments, the French can list their invention of the berry tart, in which berries are imbedded in delicious soft custard, and held by flaky, tender pastry crust. These can be baked in individual tart shells, or made in one big round pan. That is the more Continental way.

PASTRY SHELL

4 tablespoons lard
1 cup pastry flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup ice water

Mix and sift the salt with the flour. Cut in the lard with two knives, using scissor fashion. Add the water, a little at a time. Roll out very thin on a slightly-floured board, and arrange either in individual tins, or one round baking dish. Bake for twenty to twenty-five minutes in moderate oven (375 degrees).

CUSTARD FILLING

2 egg yolks
4 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon flour
Pinch of salt
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon lemon extract or vanilla
½ teaspoon butter

Beat egg yolks and add sugar, flour and salt. Add milk and cook in double boiler until sauce thickens. Stir constantly. Add flavoring and remove from fire to cool.

STRAWBERRY FILLING

1 pint box strawberries
¾ cup confectioner's sugar

Wash and hull the berries, set aside the largest ones. Take one cup of the smaller, less perfect ones and mash them thoroughly, beating them with a fork until they are well separated. Add the sugar to these, put them in a small saucepan and put them over a low fire. Boil about four minutes, or until they form a thick syrup.

Pour the custard into the baked pastry shell, or shells, arrange the large berries over the top, and pour the strawberry syrup over them when it has cooled until only slightly warm. Serve plain or with a little whipped cream.

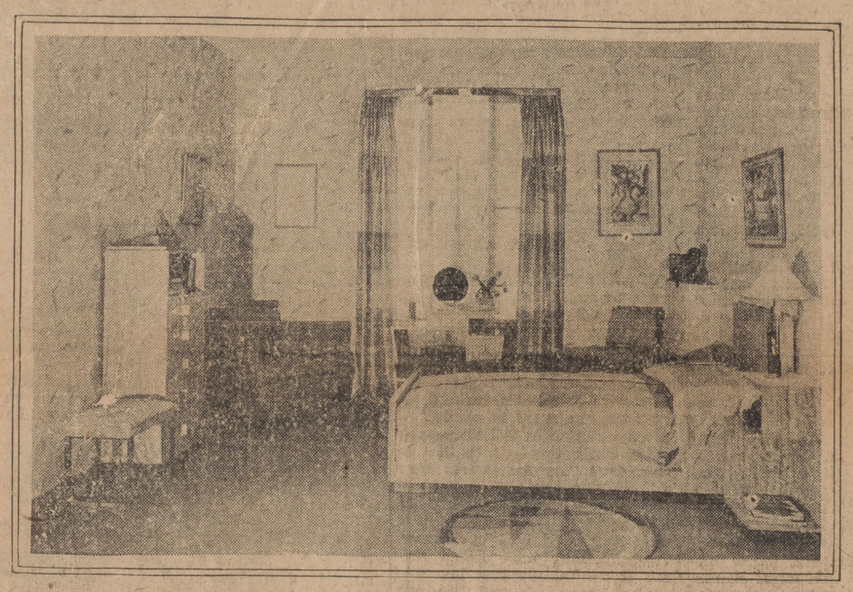
Modernizing the Home

Youth Favors That Which Is New

By Alma Zaiss



A MODERN ROOM AS CONSERVATIVE AS THIS WOULD NOT OFFEND CONVENTIONAL PARENTS . . . AND WOULDN'T IT PLEASE MOST ANY YOUNG GIRL?

PROBLEM NO. 1

Dear Miss Zaiss:

I am a junior at high school, and for my next birthday I am to have the privilege of furnishing my bedroom with all new furniture. My parents do not like modern things at all, but I do like some I have seen. They say they are willing for me to have just what I want, so won't you think it would be all right to get modern if it is not extreme? I would dearly love to have something different from the rest of the house.

Where should I go to get modern things that are not awfully expensive, and what pieces should I get—a bed, a dresser and dressing table and what else? I think it would be just wonderful to have an artistic room to bring my girl friends to, something like a study or sitting room instead of a regular bedroom. I would like to have it fixed before school ends, so will you please answer as soon as you can? (MISS) A. R.

P.S.—The room is ten feet long and twelve feet across, with a big window in it; hall and closet doors using up most all the opposite wall. There is lemon-colored paper on it now, with ivory woodwork. I would prefer something in pink.

A Girl's Room in the Modern Manner

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

BETWEEN the lines of this young lady's letter we find a very nice picture of the household. There are two dear, conservative parents who for many years have kept house among familiar things and feel no special call to change to the mode of the moment. Yet they are broad-minded enough to appreciate the thrill that a complete change of nvironment would give to the daughter, who without question has quite a mind of her own.

Of course she would, as she puts it, "dearly love to have something different from the rest of the house." And to be sure they want her to have it, to use her own judgment and to know the joy of creating a charming, original room that expresses her individual taste. For so is developed the talent for homemaking that lies within each normal girl. And unselfish parents gladly pigeonhole personal preference in the interest of this good cause.

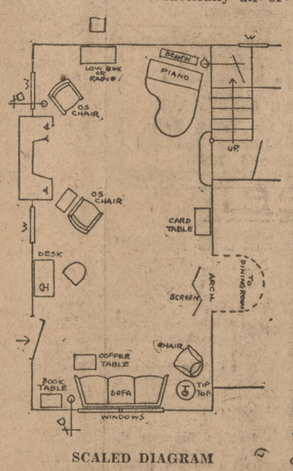
For a lesson in modern color and good modern furniture design we wish Miss R. might have seen a certain delightful setting shown at a recent exhibition which included the designs of a number of well known modern artists. The section of the room illustrated shows the most interesting part of the setting, but it cannot convey the charm of the soft coloring which ran through various tones of gray, blue and rose.

In the photograph Miss R. will find several pieces of furniture which would be particularly suitable for a room of the type she has in mind. Here the chest with its shelf of books, the stepped night table, also arranged for books and magazines, the comfortable chair and the metal bench have almost the effect of living room pieces in light cherry, beautifully grained. If she prefers to emphasize further the atmosphere of a study instead of a bedroom, Miss R. could use a studio couch or a daybed in place of the modern bed, and her dressing table could be one designed to be used as a desk as well as a vanity.

In the room illustrated the small rug in shades of blue and gray—a design by Henrietta Reiss—is used over the plain carpet; the large chair is by Alfred Mueller, the side chair and lamp by Donald Deskey, and the very decorative paintings are by Bradley Walker Tomlin—all modern artists who have contributed many excellent designs to the new movement.

We cannot, of course, direct Miss R. to specific stores for the purchase of her furniture. Practically all of the better merchants have fine examples of modern furniture, and it will be well worth her while to visit the different departments to see what is available. Good modern furniture is relatively expensive, but now and then some very special values—particularly in bedroom pieces—are to be had during sales. For the size of her room Miss R. will probably need a bed or couch, a chest, one or a pair of night tables, a vanity or convertible desk, a bench, two comfortable chairs, and it would be nice to have a shallow stepped bookshelf if room can be found for it.

The walls may be covered with modern paper in very soft shades of salmon and the woodwork should be in harmony. The tones of gray, blue and salmon rose may be carried out in the room, if Miss R. likes them. Or rose-beige with greenish blue would be equally good with the salmon pink walls.



SCALED DIAGRAM

PROBLEM No. 2

Dear Miss Zaiss:

How can I get perfect wax floors? This treatment was recommended to me: Paint well-sanded floor with one part shellac and one part alcohol. When dry, rub down with wire wool and apply second coat. Then apply paste wax which has been dissolved in turpentine to water thinness. Let dry over night. Polish and repeat waxing." What do you think of this method? Does not shellac always show surface scratches no matter how thin the application?

I think I once read in your column that the only way to get a really fine finish is to use wood filler and wax, repeating applications of wax to develop color.

I am inclosing a plan of the living room and show intended arrangement of larger pieces. What size rugs shall I buy? (I do not like all-over carpeting). What additional pieces will I need?

In upstairs rooms I am puzzled about the wood trim. The builder does not advise painting chestnut trim and I should like to avoid using white wood. Downstairs an, having silver-gray chestnut trim. If I have same upstairs what color scheme can I use in the two bedrooms, one of which is furnished in yellow maple and the other in French walnut? I should like to stress green in the bedroom. (Mrs.) P. K. S.

A Number of Questions Answered

MRS. S.'S letter conains questions of general interest which we shall take up briefly. The scaled diagram shows recommendations for additional furnishings and arrangement.

The method of preparing the floor outlined by Mrs. S. is a popular one, but in general we prefer a treatment which does not use varnish or shellac. For a beautiful waxed finish, floors that have been treated with a good wood filler which absorbs color may be stained if a darker tone is desired, then waxed until a soft satin finish is obtained. Or, as Mrs. S. says, several applications of wax will darken the tone of the wood.

We would not recommend a silver-gray finish for the chestnut woodwork in the living room, but suggest a wax finish resembling mellow old golden pine, with which the colors of gray-blue, gray-green and gold would be exquisite. No strong color should be used in such a room. In working out the scheme the carpet could be a room-size rug in soft gray-blue, the walls pale gray-green, with curtains of figured chintz having a golden background against the pine-toned window frames. The sofa and one chair may be covered with gray-green or gray-blue self-figured fabric several tones darker than the rug; one chair in old-gold velvet; one or two chairs in the figured chintz.

If it is desired to use Orientals, two fairly large rugs will be needed in this room. These may be found in blue-gray or gray-green with beige and gold in the small pattern. But unless good Orientals can be bought, it would be better to use plain carpeting in one large room-size rug.

The woodwork upstairs need not be painted; it, too, can be stained a soft old pine shade and waxed. Mrs. S.'s yellow maple and French walnut furniture would not go with silver chestnut, but with the pine-toned wood both would be beautiful. Soft apple green or turquoise are recommended for the background of the color scheme for the bedrooms.

The Beauty Shop

By Frances Olivier

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

If You Can't Be Beautiful

THERE are scores of women who won't read a beauty column because they feel they are hopeless—the women, not the columns. Scores of women who ask, "Oh, do beauty preparations really help?" Scores of women who believe unshakably that beauties are born, not made, and that one's face like one's fate should be accepted "as is."

FRANCES OLIVIER

But we who have seen beauty culture work miracles sometimes lose patience with this wholesale cynicism and lack of faith. We often wonder very seriously if the doubt and the cynicism aren't just cloaks for laziness.

There are exceptions, to be sure. There are faces and figures that can never be beautiful—according to any of the accepted standards of beauty. Skin may be improved almost to the point of perfection, hair too, but it takes more than clever beauty surgery to turn out an exquisite cameo profile or a beautifully shaped head, or hand, or ankle. That requires generations of such heads and hands and ankles.

Do we sound discouraging? We don't mean to. We wish only to be candid and not misleading about this matter of beauty. We wish only to tell the girl with hopeless features or "impossible" ankles or any other incorrigible flaw in her appearance that BEAUTY ISN'T EVERYTHING!

Haven't you seen smart women lord it all over born beauties who weren't smart? Haven't you seen fragrant, dainty women magnetize life's most precious prizes right from under the very noses of beauties who were not so dainty? And how many, many times have we all seen charming, sympathetic women with things that beauty alone is powerless to win—genuine love, fine friendships, happiness.

If you can't be beautiful, then be smart, or dainty, or charming, or all three combined! But don't, oh, please, be hopeless ever about yourself. And don't look with a cynical eye at beauty columns. For they can help you to make your skin exquisite and your hair a crowning glory and your eyes more attractive and your hands more holdable and your figure more symmetrical. And all these things go a long way toward achieving a most priceless thing, a far more effective thing than cold, unyielding beauty. The thing we mean is ALLURE.

Once we asked a most urbane young man to tell us the why of a certain famous woman's appeal. "Is she so beautiful?" we wanted to know.

"No," said the Continental darling with just a shade of scorn, "Worse—she's smart!"

If you can't be beautiful—be smart!

TELLING THE WORLD

By Neal O'Hara

THE NEXT STEP

A CONFERENCE of the Gem Bootlegging Company, Inc., GENERAL MANAGER—Boys, the booze industry takes another sock on the nose. Here the Supreme Court of the United States comes out and rules that barrels, bottles and corks are illegal.

JOE—Chief, that's the last hump that breaks the camel's back. How did the booze market react?

MANAGER—Gin dropped to $30 a case, delivered. Scotch was off at $45. And good rye tumbled to $70.

MIKE—What are we going to do now?

MANAGER—You've got me. Here it is in black and white: "Barrels, bottles and corks are illegal."

JOE—Looks like we'll have to market the stuff in flower vases.

MANAGER—That's an idea! We don't want to do anything contrary to the Supreme Court.

JAKE—How about corkscrews and labels?

MANAGER—It ain't ruled against 'em yet, but give 'em time. The Court hasn't adourned for the summer.

MIKE—Follows, this is serious. First we get that Jones law—five years in jail and $10,000 fine for selling hooch.

MANAGER—Yes, and look what happened. Millions of bootleggers got scared and quit. Why, in New York there are only 130,000 of 'em left.

JOE—Then look at that other Court ruling that a hotel can't serve ginger ale and cracked ice. That was a tough one, too.

MANAGER—You said it. Drinking in hotels stopped immediately. Why, I bet we ain't delivered forty cases a week to some hotels since that decision was handed down.

PETE—Don't forgt that other heavy blow, that it's a crime to have a flask on your hip.

MANAGER—I'm not. It made pretty serious inroads into the booze industry.

MIKE—What's the idea of the Supreme Court handing down all these rulings, anyway?

MANAGER—I'm beginning to think they're aiming to make bootlegging illegal.

JOE—Me, too. The way they're trying to curb this business, you'd think they didn't want any bootlegging done.

MANAGER—I know it. Take the things we got in the distillery here. The copper coils and retorts are illegal. The hogsheads, barrels and kegs are illegal. Now the bottles and corks are illegal, too.

JAKE—Do you know what'll happen next?

MANAGER—No. I can't even guess.

JAKE—Before you know it, the whiskey itself will be illegal.

MANAGER—That would be going pretty far. I don't think the Supreme Court would go to those extremes.

PETE—The way they've been deciding things lately, anything is liable to happen.

MANAGER—Well, they HAVE made some radical decisions, but you can't tell me the Supreme Court of the United States is going to rule against booze itself. Why, that would wipe out the entire bootlegging industry!

JOE—I may be wrong, but I got a hunch the booze will be just as illegal as the bottle in a month or two.

MANAGER—Well, boys, that ain't getting us anywhere deciding our present problems.

MIKE—What are we going to do now? We can't use barrels, bottles or corks any more.

MANAGER—There's only one thing left to do, men. We'll have to pipe the stuff direct to the customers. And use different meters for gin, whiskey and beer. By the time the Supreme Court can rule on pipe lines, we'll be delivering to the customers by radio.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

SYNOPSIS

Dawn, mystery girl of the African tribe in the British East African Protectorate, is consecrated to become the mystic bride of the native black god, much to her horror, and that of Tom Allen, young plantation owner in love with her. He learns she is white, not black. He whips Shep, bully, who has designs on her. Shep concocts story to Captain Eric, German commanding officer, that Tom has violated Dawn's jungle vigil. Fearing native uprising, Eric, friend of Tom, decides to transport him to England. Natives assemble for Dawn's marriage ritual, as Tom, under escort of Shep and a dozen Askari guards, files past.

INSTALLMENT NINETEEN

Behind Tom stood the armed Askari, but even without their support Shep ruled the situation. Tom could see nothing but certain suicide in further resistance. Dead, he could be of no service to Dawn. He must acknowledge himself beaten. But he made one resolve. He would return to avenge himself on Shep. If the war lasted until he was a grandfather, he would come back to Africa and repay this black tyrant for his cruelties.

He retreated a step or two and turned to cross the bridge. As he did so h felt the muzzle of Shep's pistol in his back.

"I ain't goin' get tricked no more like I did last night," he said.

"Tricked!" said Tom scornfully. "I took your whip away from you and gave you the sort of licking

Was she white, she wondered you've always deserved. And I'd do it again if you didn't have an army with you."

"Git goin'," the whip man growled. "I'se anxious for you to git all de way out of Africa. When you gits back to your England you needn't worry 'bout Dawn. Us black folks can take care of her even if she is a white gal."

Tom whirled on he bridge with such force that he set the fragile structure to swinging perilously.

"Gun or no gun," shouted Tom, "remember this, you black bully. I'm coming back here. Don't forget it. Right back here to your own jungle. If I find that you've harmed Dawn, I'll get you."

He turned and crossed to join his comrades. Shep, too startled to make answer, stared after him. Then, summoning his blacks he started toward the tree where the natives were acclaiming their bride.

"Hey, white man" he called after Tom. "Why don't all you Englishmen sing dat Tipperary song in honor of de wooden god's bride. Look over by dat tree dere. Dawn am a wife now"

The ceremonies over, Dawn returned with Mooda and her maids to the Temple. Now a goddess! The realization made her faint. For the first time she felt lost to Tom and doubted that he would keep his promise to return to her. In time, away from her, he would forget her, become attracted to other girls—white girls.

She remembered his questions to her, suggesting that she might be white. But no—her white skin was a blessing bestowed by Malunghu, whom she must now serve as a devoted bride. Wearily she dismissed her maids, disrobing herself with Mooda's occasional aid. She lay down, too tired even for regrets and loneliness.

"Mooda," she said after a silence, "many white folks at the canteen think I am white girl."

"No, my precious Dawn," Mooda hurriedly disillusioned her, "your father a great native chief. I often tell you."

"Tom say my father white," persisted the girl, "and would not like me to stand naked under the moon. Tom is sure I am white."

It was a topic that frightened Mooda. "Tom is like all white folks. He lie to my Dawn. Always deceive her."

Dawn rose, her eyes flashing dangerously. "Tom loves me. I love him. He never tell lies. I shall tell them, the natives, that we love each other. I shall tell them now that I am an unfaithful bride."

The girl's announcement gave Mooda her desired opportunity to silence forever the girl's protestation of her love for Tom. "If you tell them they kill you. Tom can't help you. He forgets you. White man always forgets native girl!"

"Not my Tom. He won't forget—never!"

"Look." At the window Mooda pointed toward the bridge. Curious, Dawn crossed the room and stared through the glass. Tom was crossing the bamboo bridge to join the other prisoners. She saw him fix his pack securely to his shoulders and, as the men sang, walk briskly with them along the trail to Taber.

"He go to England?" she whispered, turning her eyes to Mooda.

The black woman nodded slowly. "Yes," she said sepulchrally, "England. The white man always the same. He break native girl heart and then go away to his own kind."

Heart-breaking sobs shook Dawn's body. "Not my Tom! My Bwanna. No! No!"

Mooda took the unhappy girl protectingly into her arms. "Everywhere it is the same. Mooda knows. Woman gives and remembers. Men take—and forget. He won't come back to Africa."

Dawn felt as if a great wound had opened within her, hurting her. It was a wound impossible to soothe. It weakened her, and saddened her, too. But it also made her curiously indifferent to whatever future she faced as the goddess of the natives. The bleakness she once anticipated no longer seemed so important. Nothing was important.

When she spoke to Mooda her voice was no longer broken. It was well controlled, but lifeless. "No," she said, "I think Tom will come back to me no more."

Each day in the temple was an endless bore to Dawn. At first the natives accorded her the frightened reverence the bride of Malunghu might be expected to command, but soon this gave way to a surly dislike. The natives were displeased with the listless, and at times contemptuous, manner with which the new Thabu addressed herself to her exalted role.

It wasn't that Dawn was unsympathetic, or indifferent to the innumerable ills she was called upon to cure. Her attitude, it may be, was conditioned largely by her exasperation with the natives trusting demands on her. They blindly accepted her as a miracle worker and a power of good, despite their dislike of her. At times Dawn suspected that her attachment to Tom actuated their dislike.

The Maid of Malunghu encouraged this suspicion, though indirectly. When she returned from the canteen bringing word of the progress of the war and the activities of the whites, the Maid invariably made a meaning reference to Tom. It was always the same, that there had been no word of the departed prisoners, hence nobody could be sure whether they had ever reached Tabera.

For weeks Dawn remained in the seclusion of the temple, venturing out only on unlighted nights. She was afraid of the moon, afraid of the bitter memories of that night in the Place of the White Moon when last she had spoken with Tom. The moon had become a sort of intermediary between her and Tom. When, from the darkness of the temple, she looked upon it she beheld it as a sentry stationed there by the absent Englishman.

In the stillness of one such night, fascinated by this sentry's white glow, she wandered out of the temple. With steps which were not directed by her conscious mind she proceeded toward the Place of the White Moon. She seemed hypnotized, helpless against the urge that guided her feet.

There in the clearing she beheld the chains, now fallen to the earth which had bound her to the oppressive Malunghu and the still more oppressive sovereignty of the unlettered blacks. For the first time, since the day she had watched him cross the shaky bamboo bridge out of her sight, she recalled Tom with a feeling of bitter poignance.

She crossed to the flat rock where they had sat through most of the last long night, she in his arms, he vowing that he would return for her. Hopelessly she sighed. She was glad Tom still had the power of reviving her regrets. She determined to come again to the clearing; it was an escape from the interminable drabness of the temple of worship.

As she stepped from the clearing to the trail leading back to the temple, she encountered Shep. From his confident manner she deduced that he had been watching her. Her first feeling was one of alarm. She knew Shep desired to get her at a disadvantage to discredit her with the worshippers, and now he had achieved this desire.

VICKS WIN IN DECISION OF JUDGE

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—Further vindication of the right of a manufacturer to control the packaging and marketing of his product, and protection of retail buyers against substitutions for products of recognized merit and wide public acceptance, is given here in a final decree just handed down in United States district court by Judge Oliver B. Dickinson. Judge Dickinson's decree favors Vick Chemical company manufacturer of Vicks VapoRub, in an action against Jacob M. Levin, doing business as Lava Chemical company, who placed on the market a ten-cent package of a product purporting to be Vicks VapoRub. The Vick company has never put out a ten-cent package of its product. The defendant is perpetually restrained from further practice of such business.

"The defendant, Jacob M. Levin, doing business as Lava Chemical company," the decree reads, "his agents servants and employes and all claiming by, through or under him, be and the same are hereby perpetually enjoined and restrained from using and employing in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, or sale, of any medicinal preparations not the genuine product of the plaintiff, in its original containers, the word 'Vicks' the words 'VapoRub' or any like word or words."

The action also called to account the carton manufacturer supplying Levin with his containers and the Grant and McCrory stores through which sales were made to the public. Counsel for these other defendants stated in court that immediately upon service of the complaint they had discontinued the conduct complained of and did not expect to resume it. The injunction, therefore, was not made to apply against them, but the plaintiff is given leave to renew its motion against them should this agreement be violated.

All court costs in the case must be borne by the defendants; all remaining goods on hand are confiscated and destroyed; and it is stated that cash settlements have been made with the plaintiff covering profits derived from the business, from both manufacturer and retailers. The latter have likewise submitted apologies to the Vick company, setting forth that they were innocent in participating in the business and giving assurance that the offense will not be repeated.

The Vick company has been vigorous in prosecuting those who would infringe their trade marks or otherwise engage in unfair competition through illegal use of their products. Only a short time ago a decision was won against Frederick S. Strohmeier, who had marketed a cough drop claimed to be 'medicated with Vicks VapoRub." In that case, as in this, it was shown to the court that not only was the plaintiff being damaged by unfair practice, but the buying public was being deceived and defrauded thru misstatement and substitution of products.

Anna Nilsson Hopes To Be Back To Films

HOLLYWOOD, May 21. —UP— Five weary months in a hospital with a broken hip held in a plaster cast have failed to quench the hope of Anna Q. Nilsson that she will be able to return to the screen next winter.

"I'm keen about the talkies, and I'm sure I'll be back within a few months," she said today from her bed in the Orthopedic Hospital.

But her doctors did not feel so certain. Her hip, broken when she was kicked by a horse, is mending slowly. The accident occurred two years ago, but it was not until five months ago when a movie camera registered the agony of her every step. Then she entered the hospital.

"I expect to move into my own home in a month," the actress said. "It will require some time to learn to walk again, but I'm sure I'll be back on the set by next winter. There will be no limp, and the rest will have done me good."

Jail Janitor Inherits Fortune

PORTLAND, Ore., May 21.—UP —Word that he may inherit approximately $500,000 from the estate of his grandmother, made little change today in the busy life of Edward A. Ribinson, 56, janitor on the day force at the Multnomah county courthouse

"I'll just keep right on plugging along, and I'm not building any castles in the air right now" Robertson said in telling he had received word he received that he was named as one of 12 or 14 of legal heirs to the $6,000,000 estate of his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Dady.

Robinson was informed by his sister, Mrs. Myrtle Funk, of Mt. Auburn, Ill., that settlement of the estate had been held up because other relatives had been unable to locate her. Mrs. Dady died several years ago, at Lincoln, Ill. She was 96 years of age.

Robertson came here from Illinois four years ago. He is married and has one small child.

PINCHOT LEADS IN PENN ELECTION

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—UP —The nomination of Gifford Pinchot for governor on the republican ticket seemed virtually assured tonight as straggling returns from out-state points showed that he was increasing his lead over Francis Shunk Brown.

Late tonight, when the counting of votes had ceased until tomorrow, the United Press tabulation had the candidates' standing as follows:

Pinchot, 609,043.
Brown, 603,898.
Pinchot's plurality, 5145.

At that time there were about 300 precincts with incomplete returns out of a total of 8701.

Inasmuch as most of the incomplete precincts are out-state points where Pinchot mustered his greatest strength — the prediction was made by politicians here that his plurality would be increased by complete returns.

Pinchot claimed victory tonight, declaring his nomination was "a triumph for clean politics."

"The forces of clean government have won," he said. "Every worker for honest government shares the credit and the glory. As the nominee of the republican party, I am profoundly grateful."

Brown's headquarters refused to comment on the returns "until every vote is counted." Earlier in the day his adherents claimed victory by a plurality that ranged from 20,000 to 50,000.

Ignore Primary.

In the heat of the gubernatorial race — one of the closest held here, there was a tendency to overlook the republican senatorial primary in which James J. Wavis, secretary of labor in the cabinet, of three presidents, defeated J. R. Grundy, Francis E. Bohlen and Webster Drew.

Davis' plurality was expected to be well over 200,000.

It was only by a last minute rally that Pinchott, who already has served as governor of the state, cut into the lead which Brown had piled up in Philadelphia by virtue of the support of the Vare machine. Shortly after noon, when the full force of the out-state vote had not been felt, Brown had a plurality of 60,000.

With Pinchott's nomination conceded by virtually everyone here except the Brown supporters, well informed persons in political circles tonight were discussing the possibility of a demand for a recount.

Three Saved, Dog Drowned As Yacht Capsizes

Henry L. Conn, 152 South Fifth street, Helmer Anderson, of 322 Thirtieth street, and Joe Giovanini, narrowly escaped drowning recently, when a sailboat in which they were sailing capsized in the deep water beyond the training wall of the Richmond inner harbor. Conn's dog, riding with the three men, was drowned, trapped in the cabin of the boat.

According to reports the three men were trying out the boat on its first voyage, and a gust of wind overturned it.

Giovanini was the most seriously periled, according to reports, as he was trapped under the sail. He was released by his companions and another sailboat cruising in the vicinity picked the three men up.

All efforts to revive the dog proved futile.

Gobba Funeral Held Yesterday

With Rev. John Casey officiating, funeral services for the late Mrs. Dominica Gobba of El Cerrito, were held yesterday from the St. John's church. Arrangements were handled by the Ryan funeral home, and interment was in St. Joseph's cemetery.

4 HELD IN CAFE FIGHT

Three men and one woman were yesterday released on bail of $50 each, following their arrest the night before after an alleged free-for-all fight in a restaurant at Central and San Pablo avenues, El Cerrito. One woman, Mrs. Victor Figori, of Emeryville, was treated at the Humboldt hospital for cuts and bruises.

Those booked at the El Cerrito jail were: Joe Chebotarevich, the proprietor of the restaurant, his daughter, Elsie Chebatarevich, Victor Figoni of Oakland, and William Ledger, of Berkeley..

According to police the fight started when Miss Chebatarevich accused Mrs. Figoni, estranged wife, of Victor Figoni, of making disparaging remarks about her.

Mrs. Figoni declared that she had been summoned to the restaurant by a telephone call, and went with her sister. The two women, according to Mrs. Figoni's report to police, found the group waiting for them and were then forced into the battle.

Mrs. Figoni swore out the warrant, and charged that she was kicked and hit with a soda water bottle during the embroglio.

California is the goal of the center of population, which is moving steadily westward, though slowly.
